If he does not do this he risks wasting all his own time and costs. It also risks leading the client into frustration and futility and, with the Mengele horrors involved, into the painful reliving of those horrors.

What Posner is quoted above as saying reflects that he and the Menegle victims spent two years before he decided that they had no cause at law.